1. Overview

1.1. Purpose of the Guide

This document provides guidance on how assign probation expiry details to an employee on People Management.

This includes:

- Updating the Probation Expiry Date.
- Capturing probation review dates.
- Recording details of a probation extension.

Probation dates and details are captured on CoreHR against the employee's contract. Guidance is provided on how to:

- Directly input dates on the employee's contract.
- Automatically set dates using Terms and Conditions.

1.2. Contract Probation Periods

Probation details are captured at the Contract level in CoreHR and not at the Person level. This means that it is possible to capture probation periods for any contracts held on CoreHR for the employee i.e. initial new hire contract, promoted contracts, additional contracts and rehire contracts.

1.3. Using Terms and Conditions Profiles

Probation details may be directly input on the contract record by the HR administrator.

It is also possible to configure a Terms and Conditions Profile to include a default Probation Period e.g. 6 months. This may then be linked to a Post Profile and will ultimately be inherited by all Post Appointments/Contracts created for that Post Profile. The system uses that Probationary Period and the contract start date to calculate the actual Probation Expiry Date.

For example:

- T&C Profile defined Probation Period of “6 Months”.
- New hire contract start date is 1st January 2017.
- Contract Probation Expiry Date is calculated to 30th June 2017.

HR administrators will still have the ability to directly input or amend Probation Expiry Dates, even if the Terms and Conditions Profiles are used.

2. How to Use

2.1. Directly Update Probation Details for Contract

1. Open the Command Centre > Employee screen.
2. Click View for the required employee.

3. Ensure the correct required contract is selected.
Probation details are captured at Contract level on CoreHR, not Person level.
4. Click on the Probation Details tab.
5. Update the fields as required. Please see table below for further details on each field.

Field	Description	Mandatory
Probation Expiry Date	Select from the calendar or enter in format dd/mm/yyyy. This is the actual date that the probation is planned to expire e.g. 6 months after the contract start date.	No
Review Date 1	Select from the calendar or enter in format dd/mm/yyyy. This may be used to track the date of a probation review point.	No
Review Date 2	Select from the calendar or enter in format dd/mm/yyyy. This may be used to track the date of an additional probation review point.	No

Field	Description	Mandatory
Probation Extension Date	Select from the calendar or enter in format dd/mm/yyyy. This may be used to track the date that the probation period has been extended to.	No
Extension Reason	Select from a predefined list.	No
Extension Completion Date	Select from the calendar or enter in format dd/mm/yyyy. This may be used to track the actual probation completion date of a probation period, where this has been extended.	No

- Click the Save button to save the details entered.

2.2. Probation Dates via Terms and Conditions

The Probation Expiry Date may be automatically calculated for an employee's contract, based on a default probation period defined on the Terms and Conditions Profile associated with the Post Profile & Post Appointment.

 Note This is applicable for Contracts / Post Appointments created from all Post Profile types i.e.:

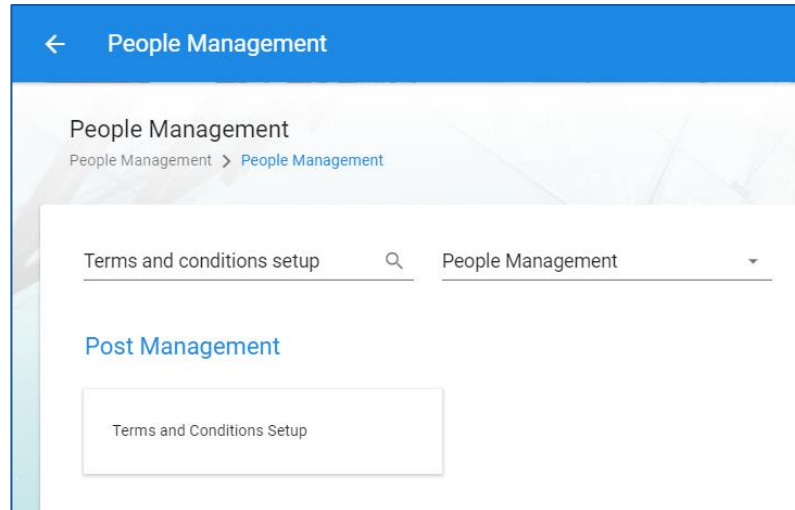

- Planned & Authorised Post Appointment
- Auto Authorised
- Auto Commenced

This section provides guidance on the Probation Period settings that are available to define when using Terms and Conditions Profiles. Full guidance is not provided on Terms and Conditions (T&C) Profiles. Please refer to the corresponding user guides for further details, if required.

2.2.1. Terms and Conditions Profile

To manage the Probation Period on the T&C Profile:

- Quick jump to Data Centre in People Management and click Open for People Management.
- Search for "Terms and Conditions Setup" and select the corresponding option.

3. The Terms and Conditions Setup screen opens.
 - Any existing Terms and Conditions profiles are listed on screen.
 - Click Add New Template to open the Terms and Conditions screen and create a new profile
4. On this screen, the highlighted elements (see screenshot below) are used to calculate the Probation Expiry Date per employee contract.
 - Probation Period Type: i.e. Days, Months, Years.
 - Probation Period: the number to correspond with the chosen period type.

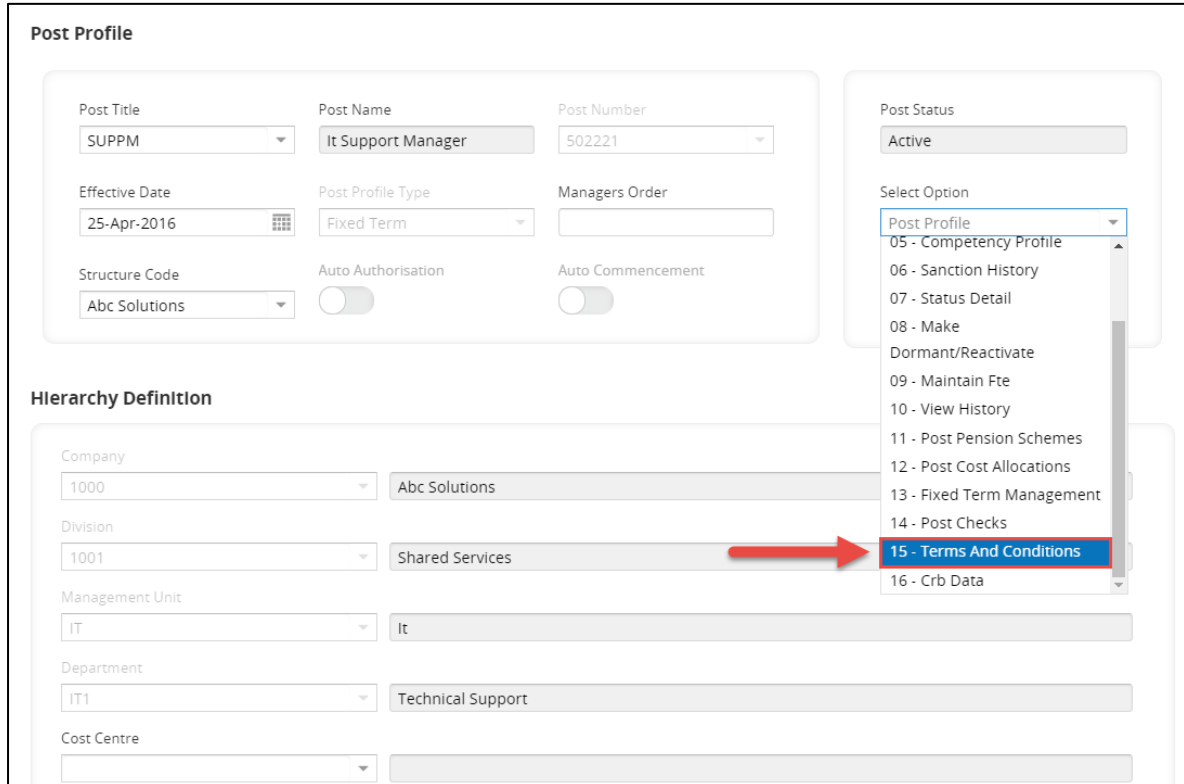

5. Update the 2 fields as required e.g. 6 Months, 180 Days etc.
6. Click the Save button to save any changes made.

The Probation Period is now set on that T&C Profile.

2.2.2. Post Profile Terms and Conditions

The T&C Profile must be linked to a Post Profile record. To do this:

1. Quick jump to Data Centre in People Management and click Open for People Management.
2. Search for “Post Profile Maintenance” and select the corresponding option.
3. Search for the relevant post profile click the  button and select Edit.
4. On the Select Option menu of items, click the option 15 – Terms and Conditions.

The Probation Period is now set for that Post Profile record. All Post Appointments/Contracts that are created from this Post Profile will now automatically calculate the Probation Period, based on that default setting.

2.2.3. Assigning Probation Details to Contract

Contract elements that are defined in Terms and Conditions are assigned to the employee's contract via HR Process Task Lists. Please refer to the Configuring HR Process Task Lists for full guidance on this functionality. A summary is provided below specifically regarding the Probation Expiry Date.

On completion of the New Starter, Replace Contract and Rehire wizards the task list opens on the employee's record. The Probation Period details are managed under the Terms and Conditions General step:

In order to ensure the Probation Expiry Date is calculated for the contract, you must click the Save button and to end of the screen.

The Probation Expiry Date for the contract will only be calculated once:

- the full task list has been marked as complete AND
- the contract is commenced.

The Probation Expiry Date has been set can be found in the Probation Details option on the HR Employee Dashboard.

- The date is previewed on the option.
- Clicking on the option allows the user to update the date or add additional data.
