1. Introduction

1.1. Purpose of the Guide

The purpose of this document is to provide an overview of the 'Salary Approval' process in CoreHR and how this controls the creation and management of the salary and allowance records for employees' contracts.

Note: This document covers use of Salary Approvals in XD Portal only.

1.2. What are Salary Approvals?

This feature ensures that whenever a new salary or allowance record is created (regardless of how it is created), it must be specifically reviewed and signed off at a number of approval levels, before becoming fully "Approved" and available to Payroll to process.

- Salaries are initially created in a status of "Pending". This is not available to payroll to process.
- During approval i.e. once approved by at least one approver but still awaiting other levels of approval, the status will be "In Approval". This is still not available to payroll to process.
- Only once the salary has been approved at all levels of approval, it will have a status of "Approved". If the effective date is greater than today it will have a status of "Future". This is now available to payroll to process.
- If a salary is rejected at any stage in the approval process, it will have a status of "Rejected". This will not be available to Payroll.

Salaries that have not been approved will be searchable in HR as "Pending", "In Approval" or "Rejected" but these will not be visible to payroll.

Salary Approvals are not mandatory on CoreHR. It is possible to create salary amendments on the system that are automatically set to "Approved" and available to payroll to process. However, it is strongly recommended to use this feature to apply an additional level of control to managing employee salaries, in order to minimise the risk of incorrect or unapproved amendments becoming available to Payroll and being processed.

1.3. Salary Approval Options

There are 2 specific ways that Salary Approvals may be configured on CoreHR. A summary of these options is available in this section. If using Salary Approvals, a decision must be made to use either of these options. It is not possible to use both. Please refer to the corresponding configuration guide for details on how to enable these options.

1.3.1. Standard Salary Approvals

This is the standard Salary Approval functionality. This typically requires a 2-level approval structure:

- Level 1: HR Approval
- Level 2: Payroll Approval

These levels are aligned to organisational or employee attributes on CoreHR e.g.

- HR Approval at Department Level.
- Payroll Approval and Pay Group Level.

The approvers are assigned an organisational role for the required organisational level e.g.

- Mary has the Org Role of “HR Approver” for “IT Department”.
- John has the Org Role of “Payroll Approver” for the “Monthly Payroll” Pay Group.

Using the above example, if a new salary is created for Michael in the IT Department:

- Mary will first review this, and flag as “Approved” or “Rejected”.
- Only if this is first approved by HR, John will then review the salary and flag as “Approved” or “Rejected”.

All salaries will be required to be approved at both levels in order to have a status of “Approved” and be visible to Payroll.

It is possible to amend this default approval process to suit each organisation’s requirements e.g. add new levels, revise the org role setup and level for each approval level. Details of how to amend this are covered in the Configuring Salary Approvals user guide.

Note: Approvals created using this option will not be available in the Notification Centre. There will be no standard alert to let a user know that there are approval items to be reviewed. The user will need to specifically open the Salary Approvals screen to identify any approvals currently assigned to them.

1.3.2. Workflow Based Salary Approvals

It is possible to define a bespoke approval process for salary amendments that will operate completely separately to the 'Default Salary Approval' process.

If using this process, it is required to define the bespoke approval process required including:

- The workflow of tasks.
- The approval Organisational Roles.
- The approval levels i.e. organisational or employee attributes.

It is possible to define more than one approval workflow if required. Each workflow may then be assigned to an employee group to ensure the amendments for those employees are approved via each specific workflow e.g. there might be a 'General Salary Approval Workflow' for the majority of employees and a 'Senior Manager Workflow' for employees in Senior Management.

It is also possible to exclude employees from any Salary Approval process i.e. identify employees for whom salary changes will be automatically set to "Approved".

If using this option, it is important to ensure that all employees are catered for in the workflow processes that are defined on the system. If an employee grouping is not catered for, they will be assumed to not require approval and their salary changes will be automatically 'approved'.

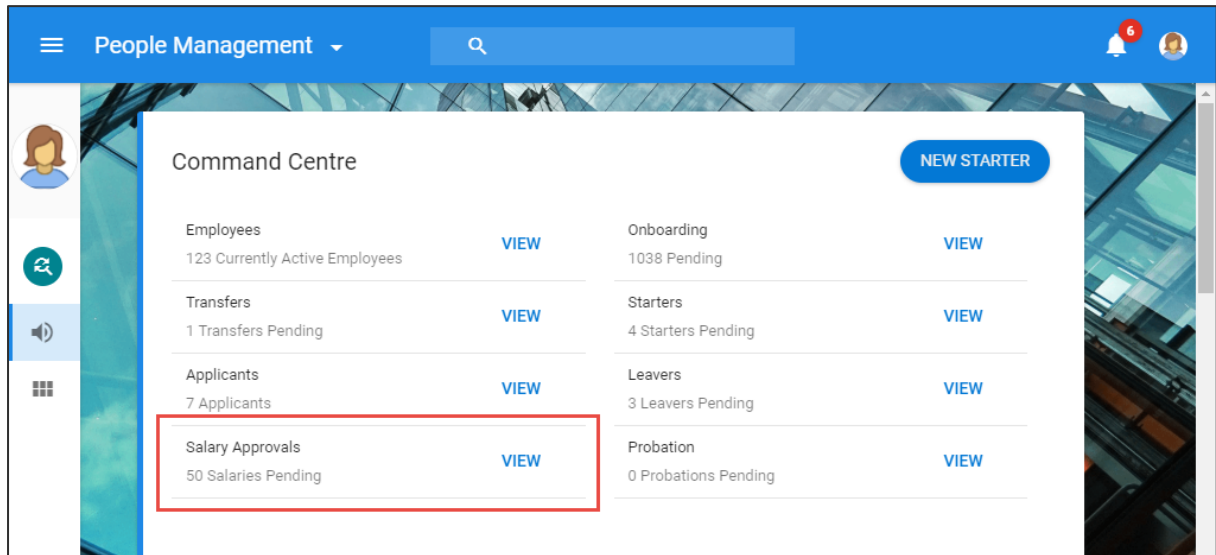

Approvals that are created using this option will be available in the Notification Centre and can be approved or rejected in there. A user will be alerted that a new Action exists. These approval items are also available on the Salary Approvals screen, as per the 'Default Salary Approval' option.

2. How to Use

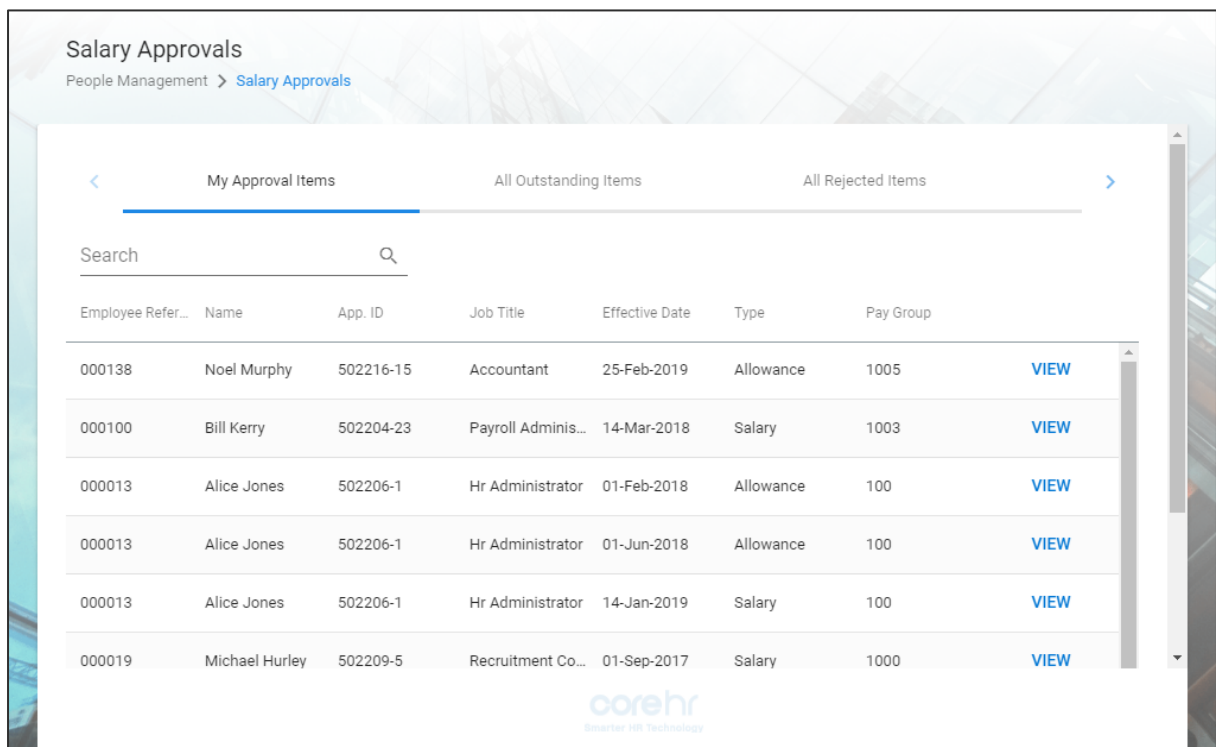

2.1. Salary Approvals Screen Explained

2.1.1. The Salary Approvals Screen

The Salary Approvals screen is available via the People Management Command Centre widget.

Click View for Salary Approvals to open the corresponding screen:

This screen comprises of 4 separate tabs, listed across the top of the screen, each displaying salary approval items based on different rules.

2.1.2. My Approval Items

This is the first tab displayed in the Salary Approvals screen. This displays all of the salary or allowance amendments that are assigned for approval to the current user. Therefore, this is the screen that you will go to, to approve or reject your approval items.

If this screen is empty, this implies there are no approval items for you.

The salary approval items listed on-screen include the following summary elements:

- Employee Number
- Name
- Appointment ID / Contract ID
- Job Title
- Effective Date i.e. the date that the new salary will be effective from
- Type i.e. the type of record to be approved
 - Salary
 - Allowance

- Pay Group

Clicking on the View button for each salary record opens a new screen, which provides more detailed information about the salary amendment including:

For all screens listed above, you will only see approval items for employees that you have been granted access to see i.e.

- Your HR post access allows the user to see the contract that the salary is associate with.
- Your Payroll access allows the user to see the Pay Group that the employee is in.

I.e. in order to approve salaries or view salary approval items, you require the same level of access you would need to see the employee’s salary.

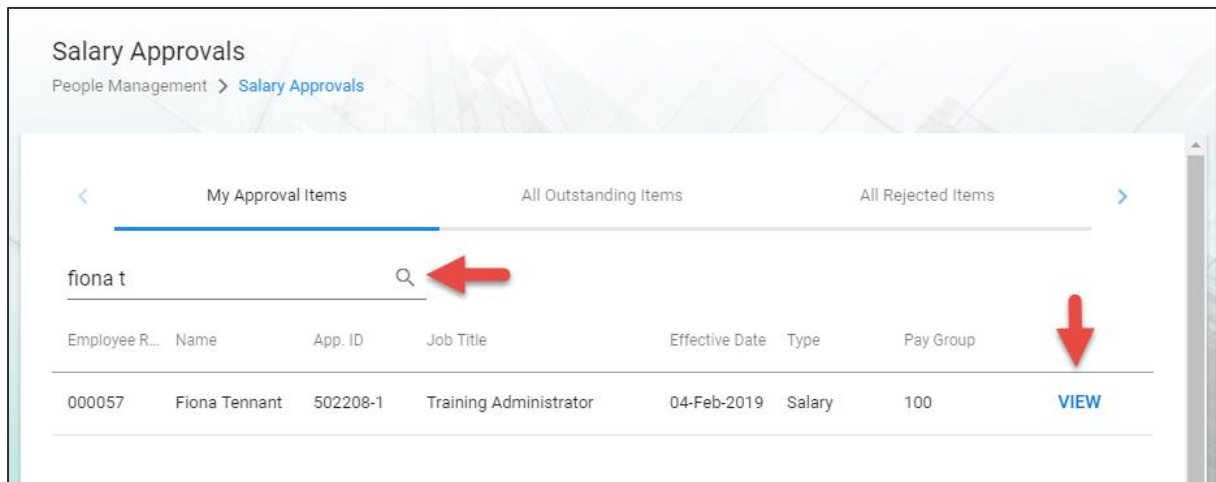

In addition to this, you will need to be granted the required organisational role assignment for the approval level, in order for salary requests to be assigned to them. Guidance on this configuration is available in the Configuring HR Salary Approvals user guide.

2.2.5. Impact of Employee Payroll Setup

If an employee has not been setup on Payroll, then it is only required to complete the HR Approval step in the approval process.

If the employee has been setup on Payroll, then it is required to complete all HR and Payroll Approval steps in the approval process.
